Population growth, inflation and increasing demand are outpacing Provincial funding for essential cost-shared health and social services

- Halton and the Provincial Government share the costs of critical health and social services including public health, paramedic services, employment & social services, and services for seniors
- Provincial funding has not kept pace with inflation and population growth creating shortfalls requiring funding by property tax payers to maintain service levels to support the community

Over the past 3 years, inflation averaged 3% whereas Public Health funding increases remained at 1% each year.

Growth no longer pays for growth

- The Development Charges Act limits the recovery of growth-related costs from new development
- This creates funding gaps that have to be financed from tax and rate payers or alternate revenue sources

The Provincial Government can support Halton in keeping property taxes and water/wastewater rates as low as possible for our residents and businesses by:

- 1 Increasing the Provincial funding allocation by $18.5 million for cost-shared programs in health and social services and ensuring Provincial funding keeps pace with inflation and growth

- 2 Working with Halton to explore alternative sources of funding to finance growth-related infrastructure, that does not impact property tax and rate payers

- 3 Participating in further discussions with the Federation of Canadian Municipalities, on the potential for a National Prosperity Partnership and the Association of Municipalities of Ontario as part of the call for a Provincial Social and Economic Prosperity Review
