Child Care Market Analysis

MAY 2019

Census data Demographics

This section provides statistical information about the market area. The demographic profile of a population is vital to understanding who lives in the community and what their needs for services are. Characteristics such as age, language, education, work force participation and income can be a predictor of service use.

Child care demand in Halton

While there are many factors driving the use of child care, there are three main factors that appear to be particularly influential in Halton – female participation in the labour force, newcomer status, and income level.

Analysis of female labour force participation rates (LFP) reveals substantial variation across Halton with East Milton showing the highest female LFP of 73 per cent and South West Oakville with the lowest rate of 57 per cent. From 2011 to 2016, the female LFP rose for North East Burlington and South East Oakville. However, decreases in rates were noticed across most of the rest of the Region. For Halton, a one per cent decrease in LFP translates into 1,472 less females not in the labour force and unlikely to need child care.

Another key factor in Halton is newcomer status where using child care differs greatly depending on the length of time a person has lived in Canada. Kindergarten Parent Survey results for 2018 indicate families who reported always having lived in Canada use child care much more (84 per cent) than those who have lived in Canada for 10 years or less (53 per cent). We also know that child care use differs by income level where families who earn a higher income are more likely to use licensed child care. Families that earn more than $150,000 annually use child care at a rate of 84 per cent as compared to 48 per cent of families with an annual income of less than $50,000. Considering these and other variables (alone or factored together) can help to better understand what the actual demand may be in an area.

Statistics Canada randomly rounds each individual value either up or down to a multiple of ‘5’ or ‘10’. As a result, when these data are summed or grouped, the total value may not match the individual values since totals and sub-totals are independently rounded. Similarly, percentages, which are calculated on rounded data, may not necessarily add up to 100 percent.
